About Me

About Me

Hey there! My name is Megan Fry, and I am a senior waiting to grab that digital media degree within one more semester after my spring semester. Despite facing physical challenges, I have never gotten anything to hold me back.

Living with a disability such as Cerebral Palsy, I spend the majority of my day in a wheelchair. Additionally, I use a Microsoft Surface equipped with an eye gaze that lets me navigate the computer with only my eye movements. Due to me being nonverbal, there is a language software that lets me communicate with the outside world. Since the Microsoft Surface is a regular Windows-based computer, there are no boundaries to what I can do!

My passion for art started at an early age. As soon as my family put a crayon in my hand, they saw a spark in my eye that I had a creative gift just waiting to get out. Determined to help get that creative gift out of me, they put ArtRage on my computer which allows me to paint realistically. From that point on, my passion for digital art grew as I decided to major in Digital Media at the University of Houston.

As a Digital Media senior, I have many skills up my sleeves such as graphic design. I am equipped in all of the Adobe Cloud products such as Photoshop, Indesign, Adobe Premier, and more. I also am a Web designer creating my own website on Wix and a personal blog on WordPress.

In my portfolio, you will see a few of the projects that I did in my Digital Media courses as well as some outside projects.
Using my skills, I have volunteered and worked for many organizations. Let's connect and I will take your company to the next digital level with just my eyes!

Hi! My name is Megan Fry. Welcome website! I am wheelchair-bound and nonverbal. Despite having a physical di my brain is sharp.

When I was born, I lost oxygen, which led me to have Cerebral Palsy (CP). CP affects the signal from my brain to my muscles. I am in a wheelchair for the majority of the day, and I use this computer called a Microsoft Surface with an eyegaze to communicate. There is a camera at the bottom that picks up the retina in my eye, and when I stare at a button, it clicks just like a computer mouse. Since the surface is a regular Windows-based computer, I can talk, text, email, internet, art, work at school, and everything.

At an early age, I started blogging. A few years ago, I switched to WordPress from Blogspot. I am happy to announce I am a professional blogger as of today. I also am a YouTuber. I edit my videos in Adobe Premier.

Starship – Robot Food Delivery at the University of Houston

August 30, 2020 · Leave a comment · Edit

One of the benefits of living in a dorm on campus is there are those cute robots that will deliver food right in front of your dorm. This is really cool if you have a disability. Just get the app called STARSHIP and you are ready to go! It works with your meal plan! 😊

My Journey Coming To The University of Houston

August 18, 2018 · 11 Comments · Edit

From the time I was born to being a freshman at my hometown's university, Houston has been where I felt the safest to call home. Growing up in one of Houston's suburbs, The Woodlands was one of the stepping stones that raised me up to be an independent woman as I am today....

(WOMENSENEWS)—Being born with any kind of disability can outcast you. Already, you are sitting in a corner feeling like there is nowhere you belong. As a bisexual girl with a disability, I'm beyond trying to fit in. When I was born, I lost oxygen, which led me to have cerebral palsy. I am nonverbal and...
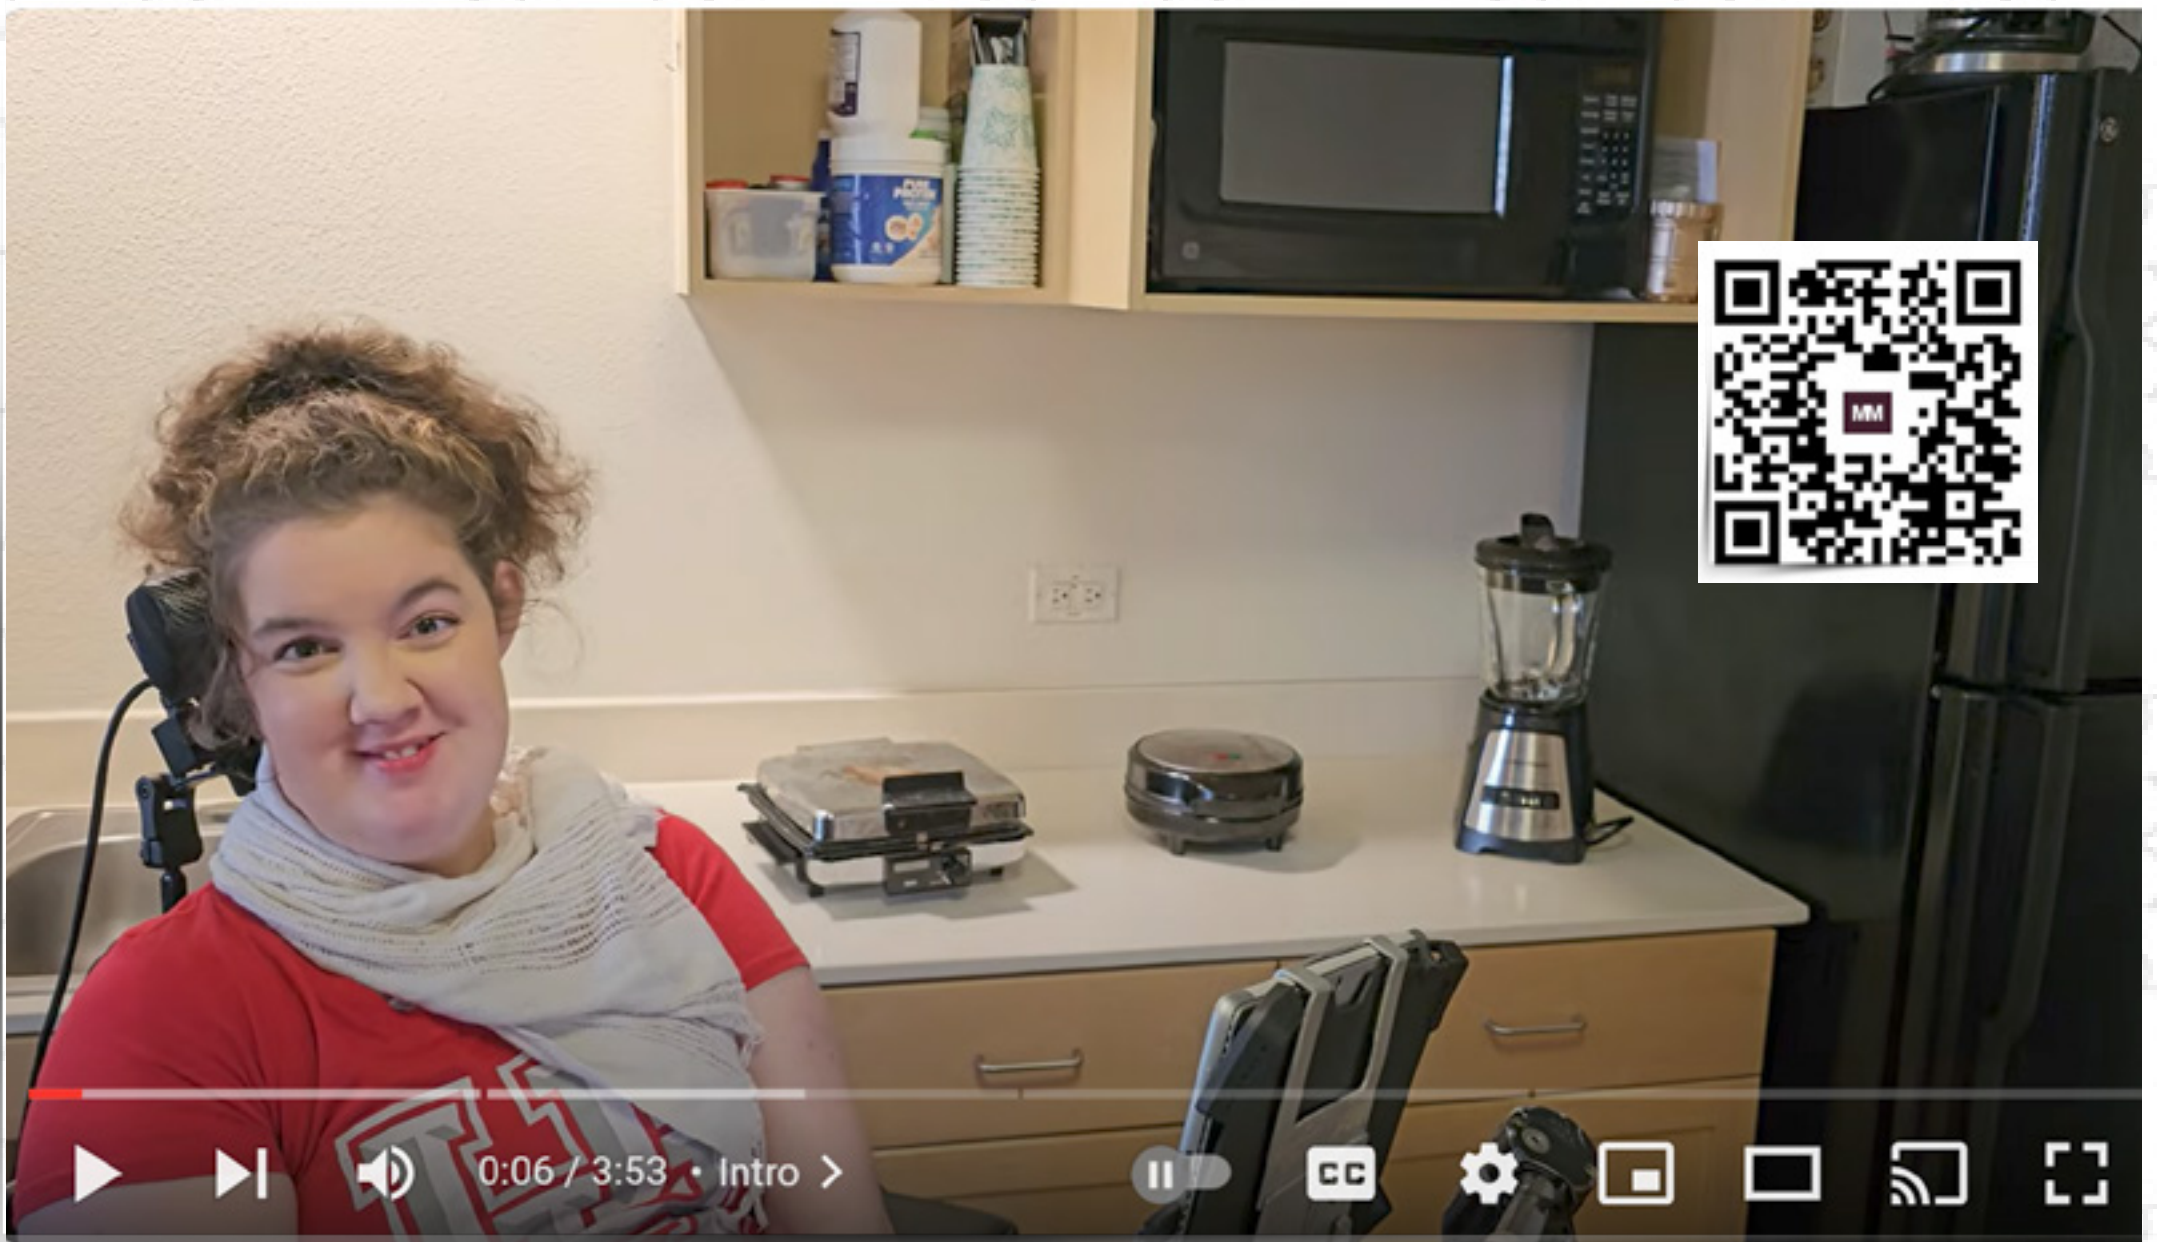

My V8 Morning Routine!!!

July 7, 2023 · Leave a comment · Edit

A typical morning routine for me starts with a really hot shower to start with while untangling my curly hair with the help of an electric hairbrush. To top it off, I love to make omelets. And of course, I have V8 energy drinks to help me start the day right!...

My dream is being a professional YouTuber. My professor let me do a video for my YouTube channel as my class project. Although I could not actually do the camera filming, I directed my assistant to take exactly what shots I wanted to take. After, I edited it in Adobe Premier.

Movie Poster

By using Photoshop, I explored the capabilities of removing backgrounds while layering elements on top of each other to create a movie poster . I learned how to advertise to my audience. I also created an album cover for the band Train using a specific style that Max Bill uses which is Constructivism along with the study of both geometry and mathematics.

TRAIN TRACKS

Content Statement

Max Bill was a Swiss graphic artist, industrial designer, architect, sculptor, and painter. Max who was born in 1908 in Switzerland, died in 1994 in Germany. Max Bill studied at the School of Applied Arts in Zurich from 1924 to 1927. Next he enrolled in Bauhaus College in Dessau by the time 1927 rolled about as known as the upper institution of design.

Max Bill was a part of the Concrete Art movement. The Concrete movement was originally thought of by Theo van Doesburg in 1930. It came from the movements Constructivism and De Stijl. Max Bill used the International Typographic Style also known as the Swiss Design in his work. This type of style involves asymmetrical organization by design elements as well as a mathematically constructed grid. The Swiss Design also includes cut-clean elements using Rule of Thirds. The style combines topography and photography as a means of visual communication. It includes bold colors that contrast each other to make the art pop out to the human eye.

I chose the band Train for my album cover because their tracks are upbeat. The rhythm reminds me of the geometrical shapes that Max Bill used in the movement.

Digital Media Program

The Digital Media Program at the University of Houston prepares leaders and visionaries for the industry. Students learn to produce media projects of all sorts, including social media, print, web, photographic, video graphic, transmedia, packaging, app design, and more. The program bridges the gap between art and technology, working closely with both designers and those who specialize in producing visual media.

Digital Media Core

The Digital Media Core provides their students with a broad overview of all digital media technologies from social media to motion media to web media to print media. It also provides instruction in key leadership responsibilities such as sales, information systems, supervisory roles, project and team leadership, and quality control. This core is the most important part of a student's digital media education because it provides them with the "big picture" and covers concepts that are likely to remain stable throughout their career. As a result of studying the core, students will be able to adapt to changing technologies while helping customers meet their goals.

Digital Media Areas of Emphasis

The Digital Media Areas of Emphasis provides students with more targeted instruction to be deeply conversant with particular areas of digital media. What they learn in the area of emphasis is more likely to change over time than that which they study in the core. Thus, the Area of Emphasis is considered a starting point that they enjoy rather than a goal in and of itself. All the fields within digital media are intertwined, like a fine tapestry. One cannot effectively exist without the others.
